Expanding into a New Market

Background: A medium-sized electronics company, "Tech Innovations," has been performing well in its local market. The company now faces a strategic decision: whether to expand into an international market. The management team is considering three options: expanding into a neighboring country, venturing into a distant but high-potential market, or staying local and focusing on product diversification.

Questions:

1. What steps should the management follow in the decision-making process to ensure the best decision is made?
2. How would you apply the rational decision-making model to this case?
3. What factors should be considered when evaluating the risks and potential rewards of each option?
4. How could bounded rationality or satisficing affect the decision in this scenario?
5. If you were the CEO, what decision would you make, and why?

Q2. Consider a business that you frequent (for example, a restaurant or coffee shop) and review the six aspects of the external environment discussed in the chapter. Create a list of factors in the external environment that could affect the management of the business you selected.

Q3. What is bureaucracy? Do bureaucracies still exist today?
